

CHE Colloquium: Higher education funding challenges

Call for papers

Universities have recently been unsettled by student protests that have highlighted the funding challenges facing the higher education sector in its entirety. In response to this, the CHE is organising a colloquium around a discussion document, to consider possible ways to reduce or solve these funding challenges. The event will take place in Pretoria, on 3 December 2015.

The CHE invites interested parties to present short, well-developed position papers proposing solutions to the higher education funding crisis, with a particular focus on funding students. Position papers should consider where funds can be sourced and how they could be better allocated and distributed. They should also project possible future scenarios.

The intention is for the CHE to produce a publication incorporating solutions proposed at the colloquium.

Places are limited and are restricted to those presenting a position paper. If you wish to deliver a paper, please email Dr Marianne Engelbrecht at engelbrecht.m@che.ac.za so that she can send you the discussion document to inform your paper.

Abstracts of no more than 200 words must be submitted before 16 November 2016. If your proposal is accepted, you will be invited as a speaker to the Colloquium. Travel costs will be covered by the CHE.

Abstracts should be electronically submitted:
